MEMORIAL DAY

1947

By Joseph Auslander

Now that the final blood-soaked ridge is taken,
Now, while the victory smells bittersweet,
Never forget the boys no bells will waken,
Sprawled on the cliff, spreadeagled in the wheat;
Salute our heroes who survived the slaughter
In all the hell-holes of earth's far-flung spaces;
But hail no less the lads who moaned for water,
And died, remembering distant fields and faces.
It is too simple, when the sun is kind,
When speeches, drums and salvos boom and bark,
To be as deaf, oblivious and blind
To Joe or Mike or Johnny in the dark —
That quiet kid from your own city block
Whose courage stained some high heroic rock.

Our orators, on future holidays,
Will work a new deposit, a rich yield,
And roll the fine resounding paraphrase
Of "... there's some corner of a foreign field
That is forever ... Boston ... Butte ... St. Paul ..."
Some Soldier's little town from here or there,
And we will write his name up on a wall,
And time will blow his glory everywhere ...
While his blood brightens the Italian hills,
While his sweat honors the dense Solomons,
While his flesh blooms in Norman daffodils,
While Africa and Burma suck his bones,
While a sick world drinks from the soul of youth
American courage and American truth.

By our young dead from Saipan to Saint Lo,
By freedom's flag on Suribachi flying,
By Huertgen Forest and the crimson snow,
By curlews over lonely crosses crying;
By the hard anger in the veteran's face,
By blood and sweat commingled, words unspoken,
By statesmen haggling in the market-place,
By solemn pledges freely made -- and broken;
By one lad, stiff beneath his stone, and colder,
His pride and fury cancelled in a flash,
The fingerprints of planets on each shoulder,
His hopes, his dreams reduced to blinding ash;
By him, his comrades and their faith betrayed
Or kept, we shall be watched, we shall be weighed.
